

Twelve Chinese Animals

Rooster

Years: 1909, 1921, 1933, 1945, 1957, 1969, 1981, 1993, 2005, 2017, 2029, 2041, 2053, 2065, 2077, 2089

Rooster is Yang and Tenth Sign of the Chinese Horoscope.

Positive Traits: Intellect, Enthusiasm, Humor, Resilience, Candor, Chic, Conservatism

Short Comings: Boastfulness, Blind Faith, Cockiness, Bossiness, Pedantry, Dissipation

Rooster people do things right with aggression and attention to details. Roosters love to strut, show off their flamboyant colors. They are industrious and vigilant in administration or out on the factory floor and can be depended on to do a methodical, precise job. Rooster people are often argumentative. They can be unhealthily self-absorbed with their own wonderfulness and are easily seduced by flattery. Roosters are highly egocentric and have an elevated opinion of themselves. They are extroverts and extravagant in their presentations of self. Roosters can orate about their wonderfulness incessantly. Having said that, Roosters are trustworthy at the same time. They can multi-task and are considered exceedingly efficient. Roosters are often direct in their speech and they're not shy about saying what's on their mind. Whatever they say, they spit it out without a second thought. Roosters love people and the attention they receive as a result of Roosters' awesomeness. Rooster people do things correctly with aggression and attention to details. Roosters love to strut and show off their flamboyant colors. They are industrious and vigilant in administration or out on the factory floor and can be depended on to do a methodical, precise job. Rooster people are often argumentative. They can be unhealthily self-absorbed with their own wonderfulness and are easily seduced by flattery. Roosters do not appreciate laziness and when in charge they expect to see efficiency amongst the troops. Rooster people are obvious intellectuals and are intense observers. Whatever they may be up to, you'll find the results as near perfection as is Roosterly possible. Seldom can people find fault with a Rooster. However, their performance sometimes may not be well received by all. And their ostentation is not so acceptable to others. Roosters' ego sometimes disturbs their decision-making skills. Roosters are sometimes indecisive. Rooster people do not necessarily have to be in the spotlight, but they do love that feeling of being bathed in warm attention. Humility is not in Roosters' vocabulary. The Fusion of the Five Elements meditation will support Roosters' spiritual growth and further refine the energy, the Chi, that Rooster has been squandering rather too thoughtlessly. Rooster people often demonstrate a wry wit founded in a clever humor. People around Rooster are attracted to Roosters' enthusiasm as to a magnet. A negative Rooster trait is nagging; Rooster, observe that the constant pounding away at whatever you see as wrong does not produce the desired result. The same is true of bragging; what is the result you desire and does vain immodesty support you to achieve your aim. Your attention to detail will help you not only in your professional life but also your loving relationships. Apply the same respect you expect to those you are close to. Anticipate and fulfill their needs and desires and watch your results.

